

Structural Geology of the Eastern Range

The exposed strata record three distinct depositional periods, each separated by an unconformity visible in the field.

Figure 1 shows the type section measured at the north face.

Bed thicknesses were measured with a Jacob staff at one metre intervals; the lower contact is sharp and locally erosional.